

"Why Do You Cry, Mother?"

In Tetuan, the workers' quarter of Madrid, a terror-stricken little girl stands helplessly before her mother, who sobs silently, dazed at the red-headed eyes. Unable to calm her mother's grief, the girl asks with childish sympathy: "Why do you cry, mother?" Emotion chokes back the explanation that would be obvious to mature eyes: that her daughter—an explanation pictured on Page 4 of this edition.

2 Dead, 20 Hurt As Train Coach Lands In Ravine

When a wooden passenger coach plunged 30 feet from a bridge and landed upside down, as a Canadian Pacific train was derailed 1½ miles south of Breton at 1:45 p.m. Tuesday, two persons died as a result of injuries, and 20 more were hurt, three of them seriously. W. F. Bachor, 60, postmaster at Laveta, taken from the wreck with a fractured skull, died in University hospital at 4:20 this morning. Joseph Baur, of Edmonton, 52-year-old salesman for the Quality Clothes Shop, died 30 minutes after he was extricated from the wreck.

Thirty passengers, majority of whom were travelling in the coach attached to the Edmonton-bound "mixed" local which serves the Headley branch line.

TRAPPED MANY IN HOUSE FIFTY YEARS OLD

ST. AUGUSTINE, Que., Jan. 27.—Front-bitten and his trigger finger numbed by sub-zero weather, Honorat Bernard, 28-year-old subaltern, was captured today in an isolated farmhouse near Nouvelle.

ST. AUGUSTINE, Que., Jan. 27.—Trapped in an isolated farmhouse by a half-hundred provincial officers, Honorat Bernard, whose flight from jail brought death to a confederate and a detective, ensconced himself today behind a wooden wall against his pursuers, armed with rifles, revolvers and tear gas.

Officers said they could see someone moving around inside the kitchen and some said they believed Bernard might have been joined by a confederate. Bernard had forced out the family of Farmer Arthur Moreau at revolver point.

Orders to surrender were met at first by silence, but the repeated demand brought derision from the fugitive. Warning shots were fired and again the order to surrender was shouted, but Bernard shook his head that he was going to have a cup of coffee and might talk later about surrendering.

Intermittent firing broke from the police lines and occasionally it was returned from the kitchen window. Officers, warned by Provincial Police Chief Leonard, wanted to do any "unnecessary shooting" without their fire.

Word was sent to the firemen in the neighboring village of Rouville and they responded with rifles and five lines of hose which were played on the open windows. A tear gas bomb also was hurled through the window but there was no further action. Bernard, wanted for a series of holdups and escaping from the grasp of Arthur Falarin, shot to death with Detective Leopold Chateauvieux when police tried to capture the pair in a Quebec city basement.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27.—The United States army organized today for the gigantic task of evacuating thousands from the Mississippi river valley if flood waters threaten life.

War Department ordering commanding generals along the more than 1,000 mile stretch of the river from Cairo, Ill., to New Orleans, to be ready by 4 p.m. Friday night to move to higher ground a minimum of 500,000 persons living within 50 miles of the river.

Simultaneously with the extraordinary plans for the huge task, war department spokesmen said a minimum of seven days will elapse before it is known definitely whether the swollen tributary may cause serious damage along the Mississippi. They said the peak danger point may not be reached for two weeks.

"We hope we don't have to use these arrangements," the spokesman said. "It all depends upon whether the Mississippi can take care of the expected flood."

Louisville Is Threatened By Pestilence In Night Of Horror

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Jan. 27.—A night of terror, of leaping flames, of brown flood waters, body-laden, lapping at the lightless homes, gave way today to the darkest dawn in the history of Louisville. Pestilence attacked the city, along with the flood waters of the Ohio, now fixed at 57 feet—29 feet above flood level—and spreading over 30 of the 40 square miles of the city's area.

City health officer Dr. Hugh R. Lusk, called today to the city hall, said that in the past 24 hours, in addition to the first round of victims, 30 found floating in the streets of the inundated city.

Thousands of relief workers, doctors, nurses, police, National Guardsmen, boatmen who haven't slept for 24 hours, took today to the fighting, looking on by nerve alone until relief came.

Property damage must total $100,000,000 in 10-mile area.

SAVED AT AGE 14 IN BRITISH HOUSE

OUTSIDE FORCE EVEN ATTEMPTED STR MUTINY

LONDON, Jan. 27.—A "concentrated attempt to spread disaffection in the dockyards and even mutiny among the dockyard workers" about 10 years ago was the precursor of a series of "very disturbing" cases of sabotage at Admiralty dockyards, Sir Samuel Hoare told the House of Commons yesterday.

Replying to a Labor motion to ensure freedom of the dockyards, Sir Samuel Hoare said that the first Labor motion in 1927 declared the sabotage was "premeditated and malicious," done at the instigation of some superior organization and not the work of a practical joker or isolated malcontent.

MOTION LOST

The motion was defeated last night 330 to 140.

The attempt to spread disaffection and mutiny among naval workers and ratings, Sir Samuel said, had resulted in special directions being issued to the dockyards whereby the conduct and types of men there were to be most carefully checked.

Tampering with modern naval vessels, he declared, might put the lives of the naval personnel and result even in the loss of control during maneuvers.

Arthur Greenwood, one of the most able debaters on the dockyard, said that the motion was a full opportunity to bring to the attention of the House the facts of the sabotage.

He hoped to obtain redress for the accused rather than embarrassment for the government.

"If any man were guilty of acting against the government, it would be criminal offense, and he would be treated as such," he said, "but the fact is that the motion was a full opportunity to bring to the attention of the House the facts of the sabotage."

Heiress Is Betrothed To Broker

The betrothal of the heiress to one of the country's great oil fortunes, Sara Jane Phillips, above, will become the bride of Frank M. Bernal, New York broker on Feb. 19. Twenty-two years ago, when she was born, her father, Frank Phillips, was a New York broker. Today he is head of the enormously wealthy Phillips Petroleum Company.

The motive of the betrothal was the dismissal of "Contrary to the principles of the British Empire," he said, "the betrothal was a full opportunity to bring to the attention of the House the facts of the sabotage."

Canada Life Annual Report Reflects Improving Conditions

In addressing the Annual Meeting of Shareholders and Policyholders on Jan. 21, Mr. Leighton McCarthy, K.C., President, and in part:

"Canada has during the last few years been steadily climbing the somewhat steep ascent leading out of the Depression which enveloped her and other parts of the world. These resources were not lost during the depression, the foundation for such faith, hope, courage and confidence as is evidenced by this and other Annual Reports of Financial and Industrial Institutions which have been recently presented to various bodies of shareholders."

We are thus—unless overindulgence creates another attack of indigestion, which God forbid!—to believe that Canada is entering upon another era of prosperity."

Mr. A. N. Mitchell, Vice-President and General Manager, who also addressed the meeting, said:

"No country is more richly endowed with natural resources than Canada. Each year shows new records in their development. These resources were not lost during the depression. They are working together to eliminate these difficulties. It would seem essential, therefore, that some means should be set up at an early date to properly care for these difficulties and to attempt to find some means by which all could co-operate in a common sense solution of the trouble."
